Our research, conducted with over 200 highly successful people from for-profit and not-for-profit industries in North America and Europe, examines how passion at work is created, unblocked and sustained.

In 2001, David Jones researched PassionWorks!™ A Guide to Passion in the Modern Workplace to demystify what we call passion.

During the interviews, people shared their definition of passion. They shared stories of having passion at work and also stories of when it was absent. David learned:

- Why it is sometimes difficult to create and sustain passion at work.
- How, despite these factors, people created the conditions for passion anyway.
- What benefits passion created for people at work and in their lives.
- And much more!

“PassionWorks!™ is a book every leader should have on their desk, not on their bookshelf. This should be a pocket book, so you can carry it around everywhere you go.”

- Linda Montalbano, Vice President, Graff Retail Group
